Classification of Naval Personnel
BY REAR ADM. T. L. SPRAGUE, USN
Chief of Naval Personnel

THE Bureau of Naval Personnel constantly is alert to new developments in the field of personnel administration and translates these developments into workable procedures for military personnel. Through research in the field of human engineering, under the sponsorship of the Office of Naval Research, and endorsed by the Bureau of Naval Personnel, the Navy today is receiving the results of study in the social sciences and particularly in the field of psychology. For example, intensive studies into leadership characteristics significant in naval establishments, the transferability of vocational interest patterns to naval jobs, and many other studies now under way, will have a direct bearing on future assignment of military personnel, particularly in the event of another mobilization.

Rear Adm. Sprague

Perhaps one of the most significant areas in which the Bureau of Naval Personnel has been engaged, in both basic and applied research, is in the field of personnel classification. This research should be of particular interest to all naval personnel since the present and future plans for classification will effect every officer and enlisted man, both in the regular Navy and in the Naval Reserve. During World War II the Navy attempted to inventory the skills of its military personnel, and maintain on a current basis all significant qualifications data which might be utilized in personnel assignments. While the project of taking a census of officers' skills did not start until 1942, and officer qualifications record jackets by which field commands could know the skills of their officers, were not set up until 1944, the classification system paid dividends. Through simple accounting machine operations on punch cards, the Navy was able to locate officers for all types of priority assignments, such as officers urgently needed to repair and operate the French telephone system, officers to reestablish the Bank of Guam, and officers qualified to participate in the program of administering the coal mines. Equally significant is the classification of the more than 3,500,000 enlisted persons and the establishment in the Bureau of Naval Personnel of a qualifications file of enlisted men with specialized skills needed to fight a technical war. During World War II the Navy as an employer was second only to the Army in the number of persons employed. The problems of matching personnel qualifications and

Adm. Denfeld Selected
As Chief of Operations

President Truman on 13 Nov. announced the appointment of Admiral Louis, Emil Denfeld, USN, to succeed Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, USN, as Chief of Naval Operations.

In reply to a question as to when Admiral Denfeld would assume office, the President replied that he did not know, but that he understood that Admiral Nimitz wants to get away about 15 Dec., which is the official termination of the two year tour of duty for which he was nominated and confirmed when he took office.

Adm. Denfeld

Inquiries as to whether he had his selections of officers to succeed General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower as Chief of Staff of the Army and General A. A. Vandegrift as Commandant of the Marine Corps, the President said that he had no comment to make.

Admiral Nimitz already has announced that he plans to live in California after his relief as Chief of Operations, but that he will continue to consider himself on call for any services that may be desired of him.

When Admiral Nimitz leaves for California it will be the first real rest he has had since the beginning of the War, when he left his post as Chief of Navigation to take over command of the Pacific Fleet after the Pearl Harbor disaster. In that latter capacity and subsequently as Commander in Chief, U. S. Forces, Pacific Ocean Areas, he directed the operations that knocked the Japanese out of their strongholds and eventually joined with General MacArthur's forces in the defeat of that Empire.

Admiral Denfeld, like his predecessor, went to command of the Pacific after a tour of duty as head of the Navy's personnel bureau. He was born in Westboro, Mass., 13 April 1891, and appointed to the U. S. Naval Academy from Minnesota in 1908, where he was graduated and commissioned Ensign in June 1912.

In May 1916 he was ordered to the USS Ammen which operated during the World War with the Destroyer Force based on Queenstown, Ireland. Detached from the Ammen in June 1918, he returned to the United States. After assisting in fitting out the USS Lamberton, he joined her when she was commissioned, 22 August 1918, and served as her executive officer from December 1918 until June 1919 when he was transferred to command of the USS McCall.

In June 1937 he was assigned duty as aide to Admiral William D. Leahy, USN, Chief of Naval Operations. Detached from that assignment in August 1939, he served as Commander, Destroyer Division 18 until June 1940, and Commander

Favor Pay Revision

Members of the Committees on Armed Services arriving in Washington this week for the reopening of the first session of Congress next Monday were evincing an interest in the current pay study that may well lead to early consideration of the problem.

In the meantime, the preliminary report has been understudy by the various Secretaries concerned, some of whom already have forwarded their comments to Secretary Forrestal, who will determine the final form the report will take.

Representative W. Sterling Cole (R-N. Y.) told the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL that he favors "an adjustment all along the line in the matter of pay schedules" for personnel of the Armed Services. In making the statement he called attention to the fact that he had introduced a resolution.

Defense Sec. Reports on New Organizations

Secretary of Defense Forrestal this week summarized the activities of the non-departmental agencies of the National Military Establishment since he took office 17 Sept.

This first formal report made public by Secretary Forrestal details the progress of the Office of the Secretary of Defense, the Munitions Board, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and the Research and Development Board.

From the Office of the Secretary of Defense have come the three Transfer Orders pertaining to the transfer of functions, personnel and property to the newly-created Air Force. The office also has announced certain policies and procedures concerning public relations, the appointment of an Inter-Service Committee to study reserve component problems. The three Departments were issued a directive ordering no reports or recommendations on proposed or pending legislation be submitted to Congress or the Bureau of the Budget except through inter-Departmental coordination.

Progress of the Munitions Board is reported and the Deputy Directors to Maj. Gen. A. M. Gruenther, Director of the Joint Staff, are announced.

It was disclosed that a committee has been named by the Research and Development Board to study problems of military navigation in general and the problems of air navigation in particular.

Text of Report

Following is the text of the report as issued by Secretary Forrestal:

Under the National Security Act of 1947, the Secretary of Defense is charged specifically with the following responsibilities:

1. Establishment of general policies and programs for the National Military Establishment;
2. Exercise of general direction, authority and control over the National Military Establishment;
3. Taking appropriate steps to eliminate unnecessary duplication or overlapping in the fields of procurement, supply, transportation, storage, health and research;
4. Supervision and coordination of budget

Army and Navy Chiefs
Back Air Development

General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower and Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, in testimony this week before the President's Air Policy Commission, backed the development of military and naval air power and urged that the United States remain strong as a guarantee of peace.

The Chief of Staff said initially that while it is not within the purview of the military to suggest support of the UN the nations must find a substitute for war. "The UN is the start for this," said General Eisenhower, "and our military, moral, and industrial strength must support it. I believe this is the surest way to disarmament. This cannot come to pass until men have no fear that there will be a war. When this time comes, personnel of the armed services will gladly take up other occupations. There is no possibility of the United States waging an aggressive war. That would call for the element of surprise, whereas the activities of the United States are not secret."

To a question as to whether the present Armed Forces establishment is satisfactory, General Eisenhower replied "The direction of the present effort is toward efficiency. Our readiness to defend ourselves must decide whether our armed forces would have to be as large as that of any other nation. The United States has a productive capacity that no other nation has and that must be taken into account. We must have an Air Force in being and a Naval Force in being."

When asked about the quality of the Air Force, the Chief of Staff said: "No air force can ever be the best possible—planes become obsolescent continually. When we stop research and development in any year we are going to become weaker. We must have better stuff coming along continually." General Eisenhower then suggested that the nation should have a "target-year" by which time to reach the desired number of planes and that the best of the old planes should be kept as a reserve.

When queried as to the status of the outcome of the unification of the services, General Eisenhower advanced the opinion that "It has brought about the greatest strength and savings. The Secretary of Defense will go before Congress and will not plead for any one branch of the services, and unification will make better use of the Defense dollar. It will prevent duplication of expenditures."

In testifying about the value of the unification of the services, General Eisenhower said "I have the greatest admiration for the Secretary of Defense," Secretary James Forrestal.

Relative to tactical matters, General Eisenhower said: "The relative importance of the Air Forces is going to grow in the early period of another war; it will have a predominant place, but we must not belittle the Navy and Ground Forces. We must protect the United States from advanced bases by providing interception. We must take into account the deployment lution two years ago calling for the appointment of a joint Congressional board to handle the subject, but no action resulted.

Representative Thomas E. Martin (R-Iowa) recorded himself as follows: "The spiral of inflation makes a revision of pay-schedules necessary, for pay in the Armed Services is fixed, and price increases simply cut into that pay with no offset in the form of an increase in income. As for the pension paid to widows—widows have never been paid enough."

On the subject of one type of evening dress, Representative Martin said: "It should be taken under advisement, and a decision on the subject should be put off for several years. Settlement of this matter should be deferred until there is adjustment in other matters. The interests of officers and enlisted men should be considered in any sweeping change."

Army Promotion Boards

The Army selection board currently meeting to recommend officers for promotion to major general and brigadier general, probably will have completed its work by the end of this month. It is planned to draft a finished report prior to the convening of the board for the selection of colonels, which convenes next month.

Closest available figures show that the present board is considering as eligible for promotion to major general 376 Line officers, two Dental Corps, 19 Medical Corps and two Chaplain Corps.

For brigadier general the eligible list is: Line, 1,497; Dental Corps, 62; Medical Corps, 156; Chaplain Corps, 26; Veterinary Corps, 39.

While these figures are necessarily approximate they are very close to those which will be effective at the time of actual date of promotion.

The list of those eligible for promotion to colonels has not yet been brought up to date by the Department of the Army. However, approximately 1,540 Line officers will be eligible. As of 31 Aug., 182 Medical Corps officers were eligible for promotion to colonel and 19 Chaplain Corps officers eligible for the same promotion.

The strengths of the various promotion lists—line, medical, dental, chaplains, etc., has been determined upon, but has been classified as restricted and not released by the Department.

Hughes Investigation

The Department of the Army indicated in response to questioning this week, that it will take action in the case of officers involved in the revelations of the Senate Special War Investigating Committee only if the subject matter is referred to it by that committee.

The Department's formal statement was that "A Congressional Committee is a fact-finding body. Should it find certain facts which it felt warranted the attention of the Army or possibly the Department of Justice, it might refer the matter to the interested agency, in which case action might be considered."

Nevertheless, it is known that the Department has been keeping a close record of the hearings, in the course of which Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers, USA-Ret., formerly second-ranking Army Air Force Procurement officer during the war, stated that he was a party to the purchase of $4,000,000 worth of government bonds on a small margin which netted a profit of about $90,000. He denied that he was assisted in this deal by a loan from

New York Times—"Tomorrow's planes must be started today. There has been too much of a tendency in Congress, and among the public generally, to think about aircraft on a year-to-year basis."

Philadelphia Inquirer—"Adequate defense means the ability to hit harder more quickly and over a greater distance than any conceivable enemy can do. This is the practical goal toward which our defense should aim."

New York Herald Tribune—"It requires little imagination to realize that in the first place, should a war break out in the atomic age, the United States would be the immediate target of the enemy, secondly, that the attack would come through the air and must be repelled in the same medium."

Washington Star—"More than a few of our air-minded experts—including General Arnold, former chief of the AAF—have freely predicted the development of great sky-riding armies, and the giant Hughes craft certainly lends powerful support to them. Given a fleet of such planes—each capable of carrying 700 men—any nation obviously would have a mighty striking force that would add something new and deadly to the grim art of warfare."

Mr. Hughes, who asserted that General Meyers had sought such a loan.

During the hearings witnesses frequently called other witnesses "liars" and denied offers and solicitations of loans. General Meyers told the committee that he had purchased $1,000 worth of Republic Aviation stock in his own name for Lt. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, who since his retirement has been employed by Mr. Hughes.

Sec. Forrestal's Report

estimates and budget programs: In compliance with these directives from the Congress, as enumerated in Public Law 253, 80th Congress, the Secretary of Defense reports a number of major accomplishments and many projects initiated. Orders and directives from the office of the Secretary of Defense during the past month and a half have resulted in the formal setting up of the Department of the Air Force as an entity separate from the Department of the Army, a unified Caribbean Command, a coordinated procurement program for the three services, the establishment of a system for coordinating all legislative and budgetary matters, an over-all public relations policy, and the appointment of an Inter-Service Committee to study problems of the various reserve components.

In order to carry out and to implement the functions of the National Military Establishment a Munitions Board was set up under the chairmanship of Mr. Thomas J. Hargrave, and a Research and Development Board was brought under the Secretary's jurisdiction, with Dr. Vannevar Bush as Chairman. The Joint Chiefs of Staff were also transferred to the new organization. All of these arrangements were carried out under the provisions of the National Security Act.

The mechanics of setting up the Secretary's office itself have been completed and key personnel have been appointed. The staff of the Office of the Secretary now consists of 90 civilians and 16 military personnel. The principal divisions of this office are administrative, budgetary, legal, liaison, and public relations.

The Secretary held an initial meeting of his advisers on September 17, immediately after being sworn in by Chief Justice Vinson.

The first meeting of the War Council was held in the Secretary's Board Room, September 22, at 4:30 p.m., and regular meetings of this group have been held since that date at frequent intervals.

The progress of the various agencies of the National Military Establishment are summarized on the following pages:

Office of the Secretary of Defense

In implementation of the provision of the National Security Act creating a separate Department of the Air Force, the Secretary on September 27 issued Transfer Order No. 1 in which he transferred functions, personnel and property to the newly created Air Force. On October 1 Transfer Order No. 2 was issued in which the Secretary transferred certain functions, powers and duties relating to promotions as prescribed in the Officers' Personnel Act of 1947 from the Department of the Army to the Department of the Air Force, and on October 31 the Secretary issued Transfer Order No. 3 which facilitated the transfer of certain individuals from the Army to the Air Force and vice versa.

On October 31 the Secretary announced that the Secretaries of the three Departments had taken positive steps towards the achievement of coordinated procurement among the Departments in compliance with the provisions of the National Security Act. Each of the Departments relinquished long-held purchase responsibilities in order to provide for the assignment to one Department of purchase responsibility for a number of major items for all services. The coordination was accelerated by the issuance of consistent procurement regulations for the three Departments based on the same fundamental policy. Positive steps are being taken to obtain maximum uniformity in procurement facilities. Inter-Departmental committees are actively engaged in the development of closer coordination in material inspection and in acceleration of issuance of joint specifications for materials.

On November 7 the Secretary announced the appointment of an Inter-Service Committee to engage in a thorough study of problems involving the several reserve components of the Armed Forces. Mr. Gordon Gray, Assistant Secretary of the Army, was designated Chairman of the Board.

General policies and procedures for the conduct of public relations by the three Departments were directed by the Secretary in a memorandum transmitted to the Secretaries on October 17. The Secretary emphasized the responsibility of the Armed Forces to achieve the widest possible public understanding of their mission and operations. He directed that the conduct of public relations conform to the spirit of the National Security Act and that inter-service controversies be avoided. Responsibility for the public relations activities of each Department were left in the hands of the respective Secretary, under general policies established by the Secretary of Defense. The Secretary further directed that both the definitions and the assignment of security classifications be reviewed periodically, releasing any information no longer requiring classification.

As a further step toward effecting unified direction of the Armed Services, the Secretary issued a memorandum to the three Departments directing that no reports or recommendations on proposed or pending legislation be submitted to the Congress or the Bureau of the Budget except after thorough inter-departmental coordination. It was provided that, when the Departments were unable themselves to accomplish cross-coordination, the report in question was to be submitted to the Secretary of Defense, who would resolve the points of difference and forward his report or recommendations to the Bureau of the Budget or to the Congress.

Joint Meetings

During this period, the initial regular meetings of the top Army, Navy and Air Force representatives in the respective fields of budget, finance, legislation, personnel, organization, and administration were held. In each of these meetings the representatives acted as an informal "Board of Directors" for dealing uniformly with common problems in their respective fields. Among the problems discussed were: (1) differences in Army and Navy cost audits under Cost and Profit (Cost Plus Fixed Fee) contracts, (2) the role of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in the budget aspects of the National Military Establishment, (3) development by Army and Navy of uniform mechanical presentation of budget data to the Congress, (4) differences in extent of authority and in areas of operation of the organizational units represented at the meetings, (5) imbalances in overall 1949 estimate of dollar requirements for Departmental programs, and need for realistic reappraisal to bring estimates into closer relationship to probable manpower, material and dollars available, (6) variances between Army and Navy in support of welfare and recreation programs, (7) variations between the Services in specific common basic assumptions in preparing various program estimates.

Meetings of the Budget group were held during October; and it is now planned that meetings of all groups will be held every two weeks except for the administrative group which will convene from time to time as considered necessary or desirable.

Action has been taken toward securing periodic budgetary, fiscal, and personnel reports and data from the Army, Navy, and Air Force.

Arrangements were confirmed with the Department of the Army and the Department of the Navy to utilize their disbursing facilities for payment of expenses of the Office of the Secretary of Defense.

The month of October showed considerable progress in the internal organization of the Office of the Secretary of Defense. Problems created by the initial use of Pentagon services were beginning to be straightened out, administrative services for transferred Boards were integrated with existing services, and the Office was staffed with sufficient personnel to meet administrative needs.

Administrative transfer of the personnel of the Munitions Board and the Research and Development Board from Army and Navy was completed as of 1 Oct. 1947.

As required by the National Security Act, a seal of office was prepared. It was approved by the President on 8 Oct. 1947.

Munitions Board

Mr. Thomas J. Hargrave was sworn in as Chairman of the Munitions Board at 11:00 a.m. 30 Sept.

The members of this Board are: Mr. Gordon Gray, Assistant Secretary of the Army, Mr. W. John Kenney, Under Secretary of the Navy and Mr. Arthur Barrows, Under Secretary of the Air Force.

The Army-Navy Joint Specifications Council has been requested to initiate an investigation of joint specification activities with a view toward developing recommendations as to how this work can be accelerated.

On 29 Oct. 1947, the Munitions Board approved the assignment of purchase responsibility for certain demolition items and mines. The Army was given responsibility for blasting agents, blasting supplies, explosive destructors and demolition equipment, mines (submarine controlled), and components. The Navy will assume purchase responsibility for mines, naval and components, and mines, aerial and components.

Other progress in the field of coordination of military procurement was announced by the Board on 30 Oct.

The Munitions Board is progressing with the establishment of stockpiles of critical and strategic materials in accordance with Public Law 520, 70th Congress and has indicated near completion of a tentative industrial mobilization plan. At present the tentative plan is in limited circulation among key authorities and experts of industry, labor, and government from whom it will receive constructive comments and criticism to provide the basis of a more definite plan.

Joint Chiefs of Staff

On 1 November, Joint Chiefs of Staff announced the establishment of a unified command in the Caribbean similar to that already established in Europe and in the Pacific. They simultaneously announced the placing of the Atlantic Fleet and the U. S. Naval Forces Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean under the direction of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Joint Chiefs of Staff have approved the organization of the Joint Staff provided for by the National Security Act.

Maj. Gen. A. M. Gruenther has been named Director of the Joint Staff and the Deputy Directors are as follows:

Rear Adm. C. D. Glover, Navy—Joint Strategic Plans Group.
Brig. Gen. Walter E. Todd, Air Force—Joint Intelligence Group.
Brig. Gen. Donald P. Booth, Army—Joint Logistic Plans Group.

Research and Development Board

On 30 September 1947, at 11:00 a.m. Doctor Vannevar Bush, the Chairman, took the oath of office in the Office of Secretary Forrestal. During the month of October the Research and Development Board, or committees thereof, held a series of meetings. The following subjects among others have been taken up and studied: (a) guided missiles; (b) geographic exploration; (c) aeronautical facilities; (d) air engineering; (e) atomic energy; and (f) petroleum and geophysical sciences. Also, the subject of security and public relations was discussed as well as administration, research, and budget matters.

The Board has established an ad hoc Committee on Navigation under the Committee on Electronics to study problems of military navigation in general and the problems of air navigation in particular. The Committee will give consideration to associated problems of communication and potential air warning network for use in an emergency. It is not a function of the ad hoc Committee to produce a technical solution, but rather to assess the extent to which current military efforts and facilities are adequate for the development of a navigation system, to advise upon the prospects of an early solution by existing technical groups, and to recommend to the Board at an early date the action which should be taken, both in terms of augmenting experimental facilities and improving administrative procedures.

The Committee which held its first meeting on 24 September 1947 is composed of military and civilian experts and is headed by Mr. R. S. Damon, President of American Airlines. Other members of the Committee are: Maj. Gen. H. M. McClelland, AACS; Dr. Hector R. Skiffert—President, Airborne Instruments Laboratory; Rear Adm. W. G. Tomlinson, Office of the Chief of Naval Operations; Mr. T. P. Wright—Administrator, Civil Aeronautics Administration; Dr. M. J. Kelly—Executive Vice President, Bell Telephone Laboratories.

All-Service Reserve Study

Secretary of Defense Forrester announced on 7 Nov. the appointment of an Inter-Service Committee to engage in a thorough study of problems involving the several Reserve components of the three Armed Forces.

These components include the Naval Reserve, the Marine Corps Reserve, the National Guard (Army and Air Force), ROTC (Army and Air Force) and Naval ROTC.

The membership of the board is as follows:

Army—Assistant Secretary of the Army, Gray, Chairman, and Lt. Gen. Raymond S. McLain.

Navy—Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air Brown and Vice Adm. William M. Fechteler.

Air Force—Assistant Secretary of the Air Force Whitney and Brig. Gen. J. P. McConnell.

Secretary Forrester's announcement said:

"The Committee will have as its general objective the development of a rounded and uniform reserve program which is fully integrated with the national security program as a whole and which takes into account probable developments in the character of warfare, the mobilization requirements of each of the services, the availability of manpower for distribution among all reserve components, new problems confronting the several states, especially those raised by considerations of civil defense, universal training and questions of cost. It will consider disparities and inequities among the various components and the possibility of developing uniform policies and practices covering such matters as promotions, pay and emoluments, retirement benefits and insurance, procurement of personnel, interchange of personnel among the components, and joint training. It will investigate methods of attaining, by joint utilization or otherwise, the most economical use of facilities, installations, equipment and training personnel."

Within a few hours of the issuance of the announcement, Secretary Forrester made the following explanatory statement:

"The intent of the joint committee to study the problems of reserve components is not to study the possibility of removing the National Guard from control of the forty-eight Governors, but will have as its general objective the development of a rounded and uniform reserve program."

This amendment to the statement was most probably issued to offset the fears of National Guard leaders that the study is the first step to carry out the proposal, made through the Reserve Officers Association, by Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, AUS, Military Aide to the President, who suggested that the National Guard and Reserves should be combined, a move which the state Guardsmen interpret as a step toward taking control of this organization from the States.

However, it is noted that while the Secretary's explanatory statement denies that the study looks toward a removal of the National Guard from the control of the governors it does not preclude a study looking toward a method of effectuating General Vaughan's proposal and still retain the States' control of Guard units while not on active Federal duty. As a matter of fact it is quite likely that such a study will be made. The selection of General McLain, a National Guardsman from Oklahoma who was made an officer of the Regular Army at the close of World War I, would indicate that the board will be fortified by the advice of an officer well versed in States' needs.

Meanwhile, Lt. Col. H. N. Willoughby, of the Department of Indiana, Reserve Officers Association, has sent to every member of Congress a letter and a booklet advocating a single "National Reserve." The booklet contains sharp attacks on the National Guard. Colonel Willoughby declares:

"The National Guard, by its statutory organizational structure, permits state political administrations to compliment 'deserving souls' by recommending them for commissions within the National Guard. On every occasion when the National Guard has been called into Federal service, the results were evident."

Colonel Willoughby contends that no logical reason has been advanced against the proposal for a single National Reserve unless we accept the following as reasons:

"Many Federal State statutes would need to be changed; The Guard is an old institution and a proud tradition, and many would

WILLIAM JOHN KENNEY
Under Secretary of the Navy

JOHN NICHOLAS BROWN
Assistant Secretary for Air

WILLIAM JOHN KENNEY is a serious, patient, hardworking lawyer of 43, who calls himself the Navy's "housekeeper," and comments quite jovially that "in my field, there's just a helluva lot of work and no glamor."

He laughs easily, as most people would expect of a rather short, rather portly man with a round, friendly face—even his steel-rimmed spectacles have round lenses; but the benign effect created by his appearance is belied by the crisp, efficient speech of the lawyer turned public administrator.

He came to his present post of Under Secretary of the Navy over a long route of lesser appointments in the government service, most of them in the Navy Department, but including two years, 1936-38, in the Securities & Exchange Commission's Oil and Gas Unit. He practiced law in Los Angeles from 1938 until he came back to Washington in January 1941 as Special Assistant to James Forrester, then Under Secretary of the Navy.

For several months, his special assistance was concerned with working out procedures for tax amortization certificates in connection with the construction industrial plants. This job was followed, successively, by those of Assistant Chief of the Procurement Legal Division in the Under Secretary's office; Chairman of the Price Adjustment Board of the Navy Department, in charge of contract renegotiations; General Counsel of the Navy Department; Vice Chief of the Office of Procurement and Material; Deputy to the Assistant Secretary. He resigned the last of these titles in December 1945, and the next month attended the International Air Conference in Bermuda as the representative of the Secretary of the Navy. While he was away on that mission, the President nominated him to succeed Mr. H. Struve Hensel as Assistant Secretary and he moved up to Under Secretary when Mr. Forrester became Secretary of Defense in September 1947.

"The greatest problem in my work today is in the field of the Munitions Board—that of procurement assignment," he explains. "We're engaged in applying the lessons of the war, so that in the future we will not have the complication of competing agencies."

But assignment of procurement responsibilities in the new National Military Establishment, important as it is, remains merely one of the scores and hundreds of problems lying within the province of the Under Secretary. All civilian personnel policies are in his balliwick, as are the many small and separate legislative requirements to preserve in the peacetime Department the efficiencies created under the War Powers Act, but lacking legislative sanction when that authority lapsed. The labors of Mr. Kenney's office in this field have produced, for example, a bill to re-define and broaden the authority of the Chief of Naval Operations over the various Bureaus of the Department, and his joint work with Under Secretary of the Army Royall produced a bill to standardize procurement procedure and set up emergency procedures in advance, so that in the next crisis preparations will not be confused and delayed by administrative complexities and uncertainties.

If Mr. Kenney directs a kind of omnibus of administrative and legislative problems, his colleague Mr. John Nicholas Brown, as Assistant Secretary for Air, has a more precisely defined area of responsibility. His chief responsibility, he said, is also his greatest present enthusiasm.

"It is necessary," says Mr. Brown, "to have Naval air strength correlated with national air power.

"I'm not sure it is always evaluated correctly. As I see it, the role of Naval aviation is extremely important from a time-space aspect. Just as the Navy was our old 'first line of defense,' so now Naval Air is the first line of air defense."

A veteran of exactly one year in his present office—he completed 12 months in office, including approximately 50,400 miles of air travel, on 12 Nov.—Mr. Brown would far rather talk about his job than about himself.

"I have been tremendously impressed, in the year in which I have been in the Navy Department, with two factors, which are related as the two sides of the same problem," he says.

"The first factor is the unity of the Navy, and the tremendous integration of all factors in the Navy leading toward a single implementation of the Navy's mission."

"The second is the fact that within this unity there is diversity, and that within the Navy itself is that segment of the national air power which is under the cognizance of those who control the seas. So, you get as an integral part of the Navy a Naval Air, which is a fact of the greatest importance in any estimate of the nation's air power."

"Traditionally, people thought of navies as ships floating on the surface of the seas. Now, however, to control the surface of the seas, it is necessary to control the air over them, as well."

While naval aviation is his first responsibility and his chief enthusiasm, Mr. Brown has other jobs also, notably supervision of research and development—"We're proud that we hold the record for both distance and speed in the air"; and military personnel policies—"The Navy's program fits completely into the Army's on Universal Military Training."

A tremendous man physically—he stands six feet six inches—he is quietly friendly, modest, sincere, and hard-working. Mr. Brown is the heir of one of America's oldest families and one of its oldest fortunes, who took no serious interest in the family's stocks, bonds, office buildings, farms, banks and textile mills until the 1929 crisis brought him back from an antiquarian's tour in the Mediterranean. The manager of his estate was on the verge of collapse, and the estate itself was in bad shape. Mr. Brown took over, reorganized, and not only weathered the storm but increased his fortune.

His many civic and civil defense activities in Newport, R. I., were followed in 1945 by his appointment by the War Department as Chief of the Monuments, Fine Arts, and Archives Division, U. S. Group, Allied Control Council, Germany. In that capacity, he was responsible for the restoration of art treasures looted by the Germans, and was decorated by both the French and Belgian governments.

Mr. Brown is married, and the father of three children who share his enthusiasm for sailing and for music.

The Assistant Secretary for Air served one other hitch in the Navy. As a freshman at Harvard, he was an apprentice seaman in the Naval Reserve for a few brief months, and his most vivid memory of the experience is the great difficulty experienced by the Navy in finding a uniform to fit his outside frame.

"I suspect," he says with a twinkle, "that mine is the biggest promotion jump in Navy history—from apprentice seaman to assistant secretary in a single bound."

Service Income Taxes

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has ruled that he will grant extensions in the filing of returns for back taxes for Service personnel overseas.

Instead of requiring all such returns to be filed by 31 Dec. 1947, the Commissioner has established a policy that personnel returning to the United States from overseas duty may delay the filing of their back returns until the 15th day of the sixth month after their return to the U. S., or until 15 June, 1948, whichever is earlier. Personnel remaining at overseas stations will be granted until 15 June 1948 to file back returns.

The situation arises from the enactment of Public Law 384 at the recent session of Congress, which withdraws the privilege extended to U. S. personnel overseas, of paying their taxes after their return to the States and also makes mandatory the filing of returns on, and payment of all current taxes accruing since 1941.

The text of the ruling by Mr. George J. Schoeneman, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, is as follows:

"Advice has been requested as to the policy which will be followed in the application of section 3804 of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended by Public Law 384, Eightieth Congress, approved August 8, 1947 (I. R. B. 1947-15, 31, at page 23), with respect to the income tax returns of individuals for the years 1941 through 1946, in any case in which the due date, as postponed by section 3804 of the Code as so amended, for filing such returns and paying the tax would fall on December 31, 1947. In such cases, it will be the policy of the Commissioner to grant to such individuals a further postponement to whichever of the following dates is the earliest:

"(1) The 15th day of the sixth month following the month in which the individual ceases (except by reason of death or incompetency) to be outside the Americas or serving as a member of the military or naval forces of the United States on sea duty or outside the continental United States; or

"(2) June 15, 1948; or

"(3) The 15th day of the third month following the month in which an executor, administrator, or a conservator of the estate of the taxpayer qualifies.

"A taxpayer desiring to take advantage of the above-mentioned postponement should attach to each of his returns a statement showing the periods of time after December 6, 1941, and prior to January 1, 1948, including dates, during which the taxpayer has been outside the Americas or, if a member of the military or naval forces of the United States, has been serving on sea duty or outside the continental United States."

The filing of past returns does not include income tax returns for 1947, or declaration of estimated returns for 1948. The return for the taxable year 1947 will have to be filed and tax paid, together with a declaration of estimated tax for 1948 and the first installment of the estimated tax, on or before midnight, 15 March 1948. If the taxpayer is outside of the United States on 15 March 1948, his first tax payment will be due 15 June 1948.

Attention is also called to the new law passed in the closing days of the last session concerning the abatement of the income tax of persons who died in the Services during the war. That Act, (Public Law 367) is as follows:

"That section 421 of the Internal Revenue Code (relating to abatement of tax for members of the armed forces up death) is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 421. Abatement of tax for members of Armed Forces upon death.

"In the case of any individual who dies on or after December 7, 1941, while in active service as a member of the military or naval forces of the United States or of any of the other United Nations and prior to January 1, 1948—

"(a) the tax imposed by this chapter shall not apply with respect to the taxable year in which falls the date of his death, or with respect to any prior taxable year (ending on or after December 7, 1941) during any part of which he was a member of such forces; and

"(b) the tax under this chapter and under the corresponding title of each prior revenue law for taxable years preceding those specified in clause (a) which is unpaid at the date of his death (including interest, additions to the tax, and additional amounts) shall not be assessed, and if assessed the assessment shall be abated, and if collected shall be credited or refunded as an overpayment."

"Sec. 2. If at any time prior to January 1, 1948, the allowance of a credit or refund of an overpayment of the tax for any taxable year specified in section 421 (a) of the Internal Revenue Code (as amended by this Act) is prevented (except for the provisions of section 3801) by the operation of any law or rule of law, a credit or refund of the overpayment of such tax to the extent that the overpayment is attributable to the change in law made by this Act may, nevertheless, be allowed or made if a claim therefor is filed before January 1, 1949."

The special $1,500 military exemption granted to officer personnel (enlisted men's incomes are completely exempted) will continue in force during this year and next, but will be terminated on 1 January 1949 at which time all service personnel, officers and enlisted men, will be subjected to the full force of the income tax, including the withholding tax.

Gen. Drake, D. C. Representative

Announcement has been made of the appointment of Brig. Gen. Charles C. Drake, USA-Ret., as Representative of the Association of Army and Navy Stores, Inc. for the District of Columbia.

Honor Gen. Pershing on 11 Nov.

With ceremonies muted by an all-day downpour of rain, General of the Armies John J. Pershing spent a quiet Armistice Day at his quarters in the Army Medical Center.

During the day a delegation of officials of the Army and Navy Union called upon the General and presented him with an "Americanism Medal" in the name of the organization.

Many hundreds of letters and telegrams extending congratulations and good wishes on the twenty-ninth anniversary of the victorious end of World War I were received by General Pershing.

During the week the offices of the General of the Armies, which for many years have been located in the old State, War, and Navy Building were moved to the Pentagon, room 2E854. The new quarters, while smaller than the old offices, are convenient to the offices of the Secretaries of Defense and the Army, and the Chief of Staff of the Army. His staff was busy supervising the removal of the General's vast files, his large military library and many paintings.

Gen. Kenner's Service

Omitted last week in the sketch of Brig. Gen. Albert W. Kenner, member of the Army board named to select officers for promotion to the grade of colonel, was his subsequent service in the European Theater.

Following his duty as Chief Surgeon in the North African Theater, General Kenner was for a time on duty in Washington, D. C. In January 1944 he was assigned to Headquarters, North African Theater of Operations, and in February

UNITED STATES ARMY

1944 was detailed to Headquarters, European Theater of Operations, for duty with the Supreme Allied Command as Chief Medical Officer, Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, with responsibility for the medical service of the Allied Forces.

Commands Replace Departments

Four overseas Army departments will be abolished 15 Nov. in accordance with the Unified Command Plan approved last year by President Truman, the Department of the Army announced 10 Nov.

The move will result in creation of a consolidated Army command in the Caribbean area, replacing the old Panama Canal and Antilles Departments, and a reassignment of duties in Alaska. At the same time, the Hawaiian Department, labeled "obsolete" by the Army, will pass out of existence without establishment of a successor headquarters.

In addition to revision of overseas command structure, the Army said, the 15 Nov. action will "standardize nomenclature" of ground elements overseas.

To replace the former Panama Canal and Antilles Departments, "U. S. Army, Caribbean," will be established with headquarters at Quarry Heights Canal Zone. It will have Army jurisdiction in the canal, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands and leased Army bases in the West Indies and British Guiana.

"Headquarters, U. S. Army, Alaska" will succeed the Alaskan Department in charge of Army troops and installations in Alaska, including the Aleutian chain.

With the closeout of the Hawaiian Department headquarters, Army Ground Forces, Pacific, will be renamed "U. S. Army, Pacific." This headquarters will continue to supervise Army troops in the Central and South Pacific. The change of name was ordered in the interest of standardization, as was the redesignation, also effective 15 Nov. of the Headquarters Ground and Service Forces, Europe, as "Headquarters, U. S. Army, Europe."

Parallel Navy and Air Forces headquarters, already in existence or to be established, will operate, as will the Army units, under the respective unified commanders.

Semi-Dress Jacket Ordered

The Department of the Army has ordered that one of the two wool field jackets currently issued to enlisted personnel be fitted in accordance with special instructions so that it may serve as a semi-dress and dress garment.

The directive states that this is an interim measure designed to provide enlisted personnel with a well fitted jacket until such time as a semi-dress or dress uniform is approved.

Instructions for fitting the jacket for such purposes are given in Department of the Army Circular No. 34, excerpts from which follow:

"Until such time as a semi-dress and/or dress uniform is authorized for wear and issued to all enlisted personnel, the following is published for information and guidance of all concerned:

"One of the two jackets, wool, olive-drab, presently issued to each enlisted man, will continue to be fitted in accordance with instructions contained in paragraph 11.1, TM 10-275. This jacket, will be for field and garrison wear.

"The second jacket, wool, olive-drab, will be fitted in the interim for wear as a semi-dress and dress garment and will be fitted over wool shirt and wool underwear only. Primary consideration will be given to appearance in fitting the second jacket."

resent its passing; few politicians would support the revision; The National Guard Association (the political voice of the Guard) is a powerful organization and would fight any group that proposed such a change."

Concerning General Vaughan's proposal, Colonel Willoughby wrote to the members of Congress:

"This subject is brought to your attention to provide you with the complete chain of events in connection with the program, and in order that the program may not be allowed to become a partisan politician issue as a result of General Vaughan's endorsement. Every effort has been made by the Association in Indiana during the past eight months to avoid having such a situation develop."

What you don't get at the pay table

"Hey wait!" you say. "I get everything that's coming to me, don't I?"

Not by a long shot. Your pay is about $100 a month short of what the Government actually plans to pay you!

Want a recount? Here it is. The difference lies in your cash retirement equity. If you follow through with an Army or Air Force career and wind up in 30 years with a Master or First Sergeant's stripes, the Army will pay you $185.63 a month retirement pay as long as you live.

To get the same kind of retirement annuity in civilian life, you would have to pay at least $100 a month for the same number of working years. That's the pay you don't get at the pay table!

If you've been in the service 5 years, you already have a $6000 credit toward retirement as a First Grader in another 25 years (or in another 15 years, if you want to retire then, at $107.25 per month for life).

To find out how much of an investment you have in your Army career—money you haven't received at the pay table—just multiply the number of months you've been in by $100. If you go back to civilian life without completing 20 or 30 years of service, you're tossing that money out the window. Just one more reason why it's smart to stay in. Talk it over with the Recruiting Officer at any Post, Camp, or Station.

He was Chief of Staff and Aide to Commander, Support Force, Atlantic Fleet, 7 April to 26 Dec. 1941, and for his services in that assignment was awarded the Legion of Merit.

On 2 Jan. 1942, Admiral Denfeld reported for duty in the Navy Department as Assistant to the Chief of the Bureau of Navigation. When that Bureau was redesignated the Bureau of Naval Personnel on 21 May 1942, he became Assistant Chief of Naval Personnel, serving in that assignment until March 1945. For his services in that assignment he was awarded a Distinguished Service Medal.

Admiral Denfeld was Commander, Battleship Division 9, from March to September 1945. On 11 Sept. 1945, Admiral Denfeld was confirmed by the U. S. Senate to be Chief of the Bureau of Naval Personnel and Chief of Naval Personnel for a term of 4 years, effective 15 Sept. 1945. Pay for Navy Med. Officers

Plans to establish eligibility of Naval Reserve Medical officers for extra one hundred dollars monthly benefit, under Public Law 365-80th Congress, have been set forth in ALNAV 241, as follows:

"This ALNAV applies only to Reserve Medical Officers on active duty serving in the Navy, Marine Corps, Veterans Administration and Public Health Service who are retained under ALNAV 281-46 and whose terms of obligated service expire in March or April 1948. In order to establish eligibility for extra one hundred dollars monthly benefit under Public Law 365-80th Congress for this group at as early a date as practicable and at the same time to obtain the maximum number of applications for voluntary extensions on active duty it is planned to terminate the obligated service of those medical officers who volunteer and are accepted for extended active duty of one year or longer from 1 January 1948. Such officers should submit request for extension to reach BuPers attention Pers 311F by 1 Dec. 1947 by dispatch if necessary. Those not desiring to voluntarily extend nor to transfer to the regular Navy may submit application for release from active duty, such release to be effective as soon as practicable and not later than 31 December 1947. Such applications for early release must reach BuPers attention Pers 311F by 1 December 1947 and will be considered in the light of the needs of the service. Individuals who do not apply for transfer to USN, Voluntary Retention, or early release, and those whose applications for early release are not approved must serve entire period of obligated service without extra one hundred dollars monthly benefit of the aforementioned Public Law."

U. S. NAVY & MARINE CORPS

Capt. Scoles, USN, Joins Firm

Capt. Albert B. Scoles, USN (Ret), has been appointed Director of Technical Liaison of the Pilotless Plane Division of Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corporation, according to an announcement by Mr. J. A. Slonim, general manager of the division.

Instrumental in the development and testing of guided missiles for the U. S. Navy, Captain Scoles leaves the position of Technical Director of the U. S. Naval Air Missile Test Center at Point Mugu, Calif., to assume his new responsibilities. He was graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy in 1927 and later obtained a degree in aeronautical engineering at California Institute of Technology.

ment of planes and the supply of them." As for air transport, General Eisenhower said: "In Europe air transport was an emergency. In the next few years we cannot depend upon the air for transport, but the role will be increasingly important. A Division required a daily supply of 700 tons. We cannot expect this to be effected soon. We must have a large domestic air force and we must have sufficient airfields and maintenance groups. In Europe we did not have nearly enough airfields."

Asked whether a civilian air force is important enough to warrant subsidizing it, General Eisenhower said "Yes."

"Everything we believe necessary for future use we must work toward now. The intelligence system must be alert and those interpreting conditions must be alert if risks are to be lessened."

The Chief of Staff discounted the possibility of an aggressive war occurring within the next 4 years.

Two Ideologies

Concluding statements by General Eisenhower were as follows: "We should become prepared but at the same time work for the UN. We believe in our national probity and we must make others believe in it. The people must be made to understand that the world still recognizes that force is a decisive factor in international matters. There are two ideologies and the great fact today is that there is a conflict of ideologies, one that believes in the dignity and rights of the individual, and the other believes in the rightness and power of the State. Our armed forces have been defending a 'way of life' and not persons and property. We cannot be strong militarily without a strong air force."

"We cannot overemphasize research and development," said General Eisenhower, "but we must get into things that industry is interested in so as not to have to subsidize industry."

Queried as to whether enough money has been provided for research, General Eisenhower said "I do not know how to measure it by a yardstick. We are not neglecting research."

Adm. Nimitz' Testimony

In a summation of his prepared statement, Admiral Nimitz emphasized "two guiding principles which affect the size of our peacetime naval forces: (1) They must be adequate to meet initial requirements at the outbreak of hostilities; (2) They must be of sufficient size to form the cadre for expansion in accordance with wartime mobilization plans."

On the basis of these principles Admiral Nimitz recommended for their implementation that the Commission should (1) "initiate action toward continued maintenance of the ready operating strength of naval aviation at the level of 5,793 airplanes authorized by the Congress for this fiscal year, and (2) initiate action toward maintenance of the aircraft industry in a condition which will facilitate rapid expansion of that strength in the event of mobilization."

The Chief of Naval Operations then suggested that the Commission should "give thought to the importance of intelligence to our national security" for "the greater the capabilities of our enemies for sudden attack the more important it becomes that our intelligence agencies and activities be the best that we can devise."

Stating that "naval aviation is the core of the power of the Naval Structure," Admiral Nimitz then stated "It will be our purpose to see to it that our carrier task forces and our shore-based naval aviation units are equipped and trained to make the best use of all new weapon developments of the future, which are adaptable to the aviation arm of the naval service."

Admiral Nimitz stressed that the nation will need a strong Navy to make certain that the great oceans continue as cushions of distance to protect us against our enemies, and also continue as avenues through which we can carry on our essential import and export trade and give political, economic, and, if necessary, military support to those nations which wish to retain their free institutions and their friendly relationships with us.

Denying that the function of the Navy is only to counterbalance "potential naval surface strength," Admiral Nimitz claimed that "there are positive reasons for the existence of our Navy in its present versatile character of surface, sub-surface, and over-the-surface power for offense and defense. They pertain both to the geography of the globe and to the tasks flowing from national policy as formulated by the President and the Congress."

Navy's Tasks

Admiral Nimitz specified that one of the principal tasks of the Navy is to protect sea routes throughout the world, declaring:

"Peacetime and war production are dependent upon imports which must flow in an uninterrupted stream to our factories, for this country is not now, and never will be, self-sufficient in many of the basic materials from which the products of peace and the weapons of war are made. In fact we are becoming more and more a 'have not' nation. Obviously, the greatest threat to those sea routes is now the submarine—I wish to emphasize the vital importance of anti-submarine forces to insure the availability to us of essential sea lanes, and carrier and shore-based naval air units are among the principal elements of our anti-submarine forces."

Admiral Nimitz pointed out that "The Navy at all times can, and does, keep large areas of the world under constant surveillance" and "it is the only force that can do this continuously."

The offensive functions of the Navy were then divided into three general categories by Admiral Nimitz—"carrier task force operations, amphibious operations, and submarine warfare" in connection with all of which naval air support is essential, according to the Chief of Naval Operations.

Questioned by members of the Commission as to the limit of expenditures for national safety, Admiral Nimitz declared that Congress must take into account international conditions and not consider national economic conditions.

Having stated that the Navy is using planes now in storage but that the supply is bound to run out, the Chief of Naval Operations was asked whether there should be a continuing reservoir of planes in storage. His reply was "That depends on the output of industry."

Asked whether the aircraft industry should be subsidized, Admiral Nimitz said "Other industries are subsidized as a part of the national insurance."

Intelligence

To a question "Are you satisfied with the present intelligence status—do we know what is going on," Admiral Nimitz replied: "We are relatively safe from attack by an enemy for the next 4 or 5 years. No nation can attack with certainty of success in the near future. The danger now is internal rather than external—there is danger of sabotage by slow-down in production."

In reply to a series of interrogations Admiral Nimitz said: "We must be militarily strong to guarantee stability here and in the world. The world needs the confidence that will come from our strength. Danger is in inverse ratio to our strength. Weak nations cause danger as surely as slow automobiles endanger cars running at 50 miles an hour. I have the greatest confidence in the ultimate success of the UN. It is the only formula that will work. In time I believe that all nations will support it. I hope the world will come to its senses and decide to live at peace. Our safety does not depend on any other nation."

When asked "Will it be sufficient to keep our forces at their present level," Admiral Nimitz replied "I believe we have sufficient strength at present to protect ourselves. We must improve the quality, however. I have faith in the future, but believe we should have sufficient strength in the meantime."

To a query as whether there are sufficient funds available for research and development, Admiral Nimitz said "Yes—the research talent in this country is not sufficient to require greater appropriations at present."

Hearings will be continued on 18 Nov. with the Chief of the Air Force, General Carl Spaatz, as a witness.

Air Reserve Forums

The second postwar annual National Convention of the Air Reserve Association at Oklahoma City on 14-16 Nov. is literally an Air Reserve Clinic. The Clinic is featuring four principal forums on Air Reserve matters at which United States Air Force Chiefs and members of ARA will mutually discuss and consider past, present and future policies and administration of the Air Force Reserve by the USAF.

The first forum, on Air Information, was led by Maj. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, Director of Air Information, USAF, at a Luncheon 14 Nov. This was followed that afternoon by a forum on Air Reserve Personnel and Administration headed by Lt. Gen. I. H. Edwards, USAF Chief of Personnel and Administration, whose address was the principle feature of the forum.

The third forum, to be conducted this morning, 15 Nov., will be devoted to Air Reserve Operations with specific emphasis on Training and Requirements. The address of Maj. Gen. E. E. Partridge, USAF Director of Training and Requirements, will be the highlight of this forum. Participating in the forum with General Partridge will be Brig. Gen. John P. McConnell, USAF Director of the Reserve and National Guard Division.

The fourth and final forum, which will be devoted to the Air Reserve Training Program, will be centered on an address by Lt. General George E. Stratemeyer, Commanding General of the Air Defense Command, at the Convention Banquet tonight, 15 Nov.

USAF Selection Board

The United States Air Force board currently meeting for the selection of officers for promotion to colonel is still in session despite rumors that it expected to complete its work last week.

This is the third USAF board to meet, the others, for the selection of general officers, having completed their work some time ago.

Joins ATC Atlantic Div.

Mr. Robert White, (Col. Air Res), chief aircraft engineer and maintenance officer for the famed wartime "Hump" operation in the China, Burma, India Division, Air Transport Command, has joined the staff of the Atlantic Division, Air Transport Command, here as Division aircraft maintenance engineer.

As chief aircraft engineer for the Atlantic Division, Mr. White will have the maintenance responsibility for the Air Transport Command, transport flying the Division's more than 60,000 miles of air lanes from California to Saudi Arabia, and from Greenland to South America.

Air Travel for Dependents

Overseas commanders have been authorized to use regularly scheduled aircraft of the U. S. Air Force Air Transport Command in addition to Army transport vessels for the transportation of military personnel and their dependents returning from overseas stations to the United States.

The Department of the Army said the action, which follows a recent order permitting the air movement of military families to the Pacific Zone applies to personnel and dependents leaving the theaters upon expiration of duty tours or for other routine reasons. No increase in military air operations will result from this order.

The program will be coordinated with movement of families by Army transport vessels so that most effective use may be made of both military air and water transportation facilities.

Fairfield-Suisun, AAFld., Calif.—Nine more families will shortly be reunited with their husbands in new homes on the Island of Okinawa after completing a 7,000-mile Trans-Pacific flight aboard an Air Transport Command Pacific Division C-54, from the ATC's Fairfield-Suisun AAFld., Calif.

"The Army and Navy Journal is established in the interests of no party; it will be controlled by no clique. Its independence will be absolute. Avoiding all personal and political bias, its influence will be directed solely to the inculcation of sound military ideas, and to the elevation of the public service in all its departments."—From Vol. 1, No. 1, of the Army and Navy Journal, published August 29, 1903.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1947

"We are not letting the possession of arms lure us into a false sense of security. We recognize that in the development and improvement of weapons America must stay in the vanguard of progress."—THE HON. KENNETH ROYALL.

BECAUSE so much has been accomplished and conditions affecting our National Security are continually changing, the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL will completely revise, for the impending session of Congress, the "Priority List" which it has been our custom for many years to carry at the head of this page as a "must" for defense legislation. This list of the principle long-range editorial objectives is published as a constant reminder, particularly to the Senators and Representatives, of those things which are essential to the protection of our country, and the discharge of our vital interests and obligations. One subject to merit high priority is that of increased Service pay, for the nation can not expect that those charged with its safeguarding can put forth their best efforts and clearest planning while forced to maintain 1948 living standards at 1948 prices on pay scales that vary little from those set up in 1908. Even so, the wheels are now in motion further to reduce their net income, for the $1,500 military income tax exemption granted when they were actively fighting the war will be terminated at the end of 1948. Then there is the movement for a new dress uniform, which despite assurances that it will not be universally required, cannot help but grow to the point where every officer will feel obligated to own this expensive item of equipment. Service personnel cannot hope ever to be sumptuously paid, or even to approach the standards of comparable responsibility and professional attainment in business and industry, but it is obvious that they should be made relatively free from the worries of balancing the day-to-day family budget. Thus it is essential to a sound National Defense that the entire pay schedule be revised. This revision, too, should extend to retired personnel and to the widows and orphans of those who have devoted their lives to their country's service—this so that those on active duty may know that their future and that of their dependents will not be jeopardized. That's we believe to be a foundation vital to the effective functioning of the other projects needed to bulwark our defenses—Universal Military Training, a diversified research and development program, ample strength in our Land, Sea and Air Regular, Reserve, and National Guard components, a well supported industrial background, the building of the best service schools, etc. To assist us in compiling a sound, strong program for our "Priority List" we ask our readers to send in to us now their suggestions for projects that should be included to make our country strong. All of these will be welcomed and weighed for incorporation in the final list.

IN issuing a formal report to the public on the progress of the National Military Establishment during its less than two months of existence, Secretary of Defense James Forrestal is carrying out the public relations policy he laid down last month for the Army, Navy, and Air Force that "The Armed Forces of a democratic nation have a positive responsibility to achieve the widest possible public understanding of their mission and operations." His report, the full text of which is published elsewhere in this issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, shows the care and rapidity with which Mr. Forrestal is putting into effect the terms of the National Security Act. In three Transfer Orders he has started the Air Force on its path to independence, coordinated procurement has been initiated, legislative and budgetary proposals are being correlated, a joint study of all reserve problems is underway, and the War Council, the Munitions Board, and the Research and Development Board have been organized, regular meetings held and their programs mapped out. Particularly encouraging is the Secretary's revelation that the Munitions Board is progressing with the establishment of stockpiles of critical and strategic materials and that a tentative industrial mobilization plan is so near completion that drafts are in limited circulation among key authorities and experts of industry, labor, and government, from whom he expects constructive comments and criticism on which a more definite plan may be finally based. It is particularly in these aspects of the new Act that concrete and lasting results may be expected to accrue, for in integrating industry with the defense forces in a permanent statutory organization the full weight of the productive capacity of the United States may be more nearly available at the outset of a war rather than awaiting until after the initial impact to build it up. In two great wars American industry has astounded the world, and particularly our enemies, by the speed with which it shifted from peace to war production, but the age of atomic warfare and guided missiles will deny us even that small cushion of time in which to make the change over. We must now have productive capacity "in being" the same as we must have a ready combat force "in being" if we are to avert disaster. This will require not only detailed planning, but also constant production orders and educational orders to keep industry's plants in operation and to preserve their "know how" as well as to keep the Armed Forces modernly equipped. Mr. Forrestal's report shows the substantial progress being made in stockpiling and mobilization planning. Upon Congress rests the responsibility for appropriation of the funds for the necessary production and educational orders.

S. J. K.—AR 210-60 is the regulation which covers rules pertaining to Officers' and Non Commissioned Officers' Clubs. This regulation states that membership will be on a voluntary basis, and there is no provision that a member must submit a request for resignation if he wishes to resign.

A. T. M.—WD Circulars 187, and 84, 1947; 267 and 328, 1946 and Department of the Army Circular 9, 1947 cover educational programs and courses open to Army Officers. Application should be made to the Commanding General of your branch of the service. Further information can be obtained from your "I and E" officer.

R. W. M.—An AUS officer may request separation for the purpose of reenlistment under the provisions of WD Circulars 126, 1946 or 72, 1947. He may then be enlisted as a master sergeant under the provisions of WD Circular 31, 1947 (Certain Air Corps Officers are excepted).

The Bureau of Ordnance, Navy Department, is experimenting with a new lever for turning turrets. On all the battleships and armored cruisers, with the exception of the Massachusetts, the turrets are trained by means of a floating lever, a wheel which the gunner is compelled to revolve constantly in order to turn the turret. The Massachusetts has been equipped with a direct lever, which trains the turrets as satisfactorily as the floating lever.

80 Years Ago

We are sorry to learn that the Indian Commissioners could accomplish nothing at Fort Laramie. As we feared, the Sioux were not there to meet them. We are glad the Commission did not take the trouble to make peace with the Crows. The Crows have been at peace with us all along. They have, indeed, almost been allies, and there is as little need of making peace with them as with the Pawnees. They have for months carried our mails to and from such posts as Fort C. F. Smith, when none but Indian couriers were safe.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—Why in his address on 28 October celebrating the anniversary of the Russian revolution, did Foreign Commissar Molotov assert that the Atom Bomb is no longer a secret, and why, a few days later, was circulation given to rumors of the explosion of such a bomb at "Atomgrad" near Irkutsk, Siberia? It had been expected that this spokesman for Generalissimo Stalin would assail the United States, perhaps a shade less violently than Vishinsky and Gromyko and other Soviet delegates are doing at the UN Assembly meetings, but it was surprising that he should have coupled with an expression of willingness to cooperate with the United States, (as unexpectedly demonstrated in connection with the partition of Palestine to form a Jewish and Arab state—although subsequently Great Britain has announced that she will turn down the proposal because of the danger of war with the Moslems) a declaration of Russia's possession of the bomb secret, and an expression of grave concern at the military support we are giving to Greece and Turkey, at our establishment of air and naval bases in the Arctic region and at the continued existence of the Anglo-American Combined Chiefs of Staff. A variety of reasons probably was responsible for the Commissar's remarks. They were, of course, for home consumption, and to reassure the Russian people and those of the Satellite states that Moscow in the matter of the bomb, is prepared to give as good as it sends, and, by dwelling upon our moves as designed to "encircle" those countries, to emphasize that we and not the Soviet Union, are threatening and aiming at world domination. Molotov also spoke after the President had issued his call for the reassembling of Congress to receive a message on emergency and long range relief for the sixteen western nations of Europe and China, and he must have thought his views would have influence in the consideration to be given to the enabling legislation. Impending, too, was the meeting of the Foreign Ministers of the Great Powers in London to take up anew the matter of peace treaties with Germany and Austria, and he may have wished to give the impression that our warlike attitude made agreements impossible.

Washington has made prompt answer to Molotov on all the points he raised. As to the Atomic Bomb, its secret was revealed at Hiroshima, but the know-how of its manufacture and the huge cost of its production, are something else. Promptly after the occupation of Germany, the Soviets seized a number of nuclear physicists and set them with Russian scientists to work at the development of atomic missiles. Those experts were given ample funds and supplied with information picked up by secret agents in the United States, Canada and England. Of course, they have made progress, but the extent we are not fully informed. Former Senator Austin, permanent delegate to the UN, sparring with Soviet Deputy Foreign Commissar Vishinsky before the Foreign Press Association on 11 November, observed that "it is the atomic scientists who will tell you that there is a great gap between the possession of a scientific fact and possession of a knowledge and technique of production." Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, said the report that the Russians had exploded a 12½-pound bomb in Siberia on 15 June last, "sounds like somebody having a pipe dream." But even if the Soviets have a "small sample" bomb, the fact remains that our own development has provided us with a bomb many, many times more destructive than that used on Hiroshima, Nagasaki, and Bikini. Moreover, we have available for use atomic power in many ways the world does not know. All this doubtless Molotov feared when he delivered his address.

Regarding other matters spoken of by the Soviet Minister, emphatic statements were made during the week by our Government. In a report to Congress the President declared that "the continued support of the guerrillas by Greece's northern neighbors has resulted in an overall worsening of the military situation," and the world knows that back of Yugo-Slavia and Bulgaria is Soviet Russia. In connection with Turkey, the President in the same report bluntly stated that the $100 million aid program is designed to assist Turkey in increasing her power to resist external aggression by supplying to her modern military equipment and training in its use. That aggression could come only from Russia. Secretary Marshall, testifying on relief, bluntly stated that "only one power, the Soviet Union, does not for its own reasons share in our aim to help European recovery." As to the Satellite states, just as he denounced the travesty of the Petkov trial in Bulgaria, so he condemned the trial and sentencing to life imprisonment of Former Premier Maniu in Roumania "as another instance of efforts in the Balkan area to eliminate all democratic opposition to Communist dominated regimes." There is no doubt that Congress will authorize and appropriate emergency aid so that France, Italy and Austria, to quote the Secretary, will be able "to eat, to work and to survive the coming winter." Although the Secretary's estimates to accomplish this purpose, $597 millions, are half of those submitted by the needy governments, Congress may reduce the appropriations somewhat; at least this is the demand of Senator Taft. Secretary of the Army Royall is asking for an additional $500 millions for occupational costs, $300 millions of which will take care of requirements in what General Marshall describes as "western Germany," that is to say the American, British and French zones, and $200 millions for use in Japan and Korea. By the time the funds for Europe are used up—31 March is the expected limit—the President and Secretary Marshall hope Congress will have enacted the long range recovery plan for Western Europe. This would require an appropriation of $7½ billions for the fifteen months period beginning 1 April and ending 30 June 1949, and between $16 and $20 billions over the proposed four-year period. There will be a program of aid costing around $300 millions, also for the national government of China, "the sole legal government." According to the Secretary of Commerce, our country economically can afford all this expenditure, but a danger signal has been run up regarding our grain production because of the drought prevalent in the five western states which make crop prospects for next year poor. Congress is taking all the facts into consideration, and based upon them and also, and this cannot be forgotten, politics in a presidential year, it will enact the appropriations it decides to be advisable.

Of especial interest to the Services are the military features of the President's report on the progress of our aid to Greece and Turkey. That report says it is too early to claim substantive success in the Greek Mission's work, but its very presence in Greece and the material assistance thus far given have been responsible for the fact that the country is still free and the people still have a government of their own choosing. The extensive public works in which the Army Corps of Engineers is engaged, are described in some detail. The military program is thus discussed:

"If Greece is to survive as a free and independent nation, it must preserve its national security. Although the number of rebel guerrillas threatening this security is small, they are fanatically led by Communists who have recruited many hardened criminals, and who have forced loyal Greeks into their service by threats against them or their families.

"Defeating the guerrilla forces under the adverse conditions of mountain fighting is a task made more difficult by the aid rendered to the guerrillas by Greece's northern neighbors. The existence of this assistance was established by the United Nations Commission of Investigation Concerning Greek Frontier Incidents.

"The impending cessation of military aid from the British left Greece in a state of increasing disorder. Unable to maintain from its own reserves the force of men necessary to cope with the problem, Greece appealed to the United States as the only country both willing and able to help.

"Shortly after the passage of the assistance act, small United States Army and Navy groups were dispatched to Greece. They established working relationships with Greek officials and undertook a review of the requirements for equipment and supplies which were drawn up by the Greek Army General Staff and by the Greek Navy. This review was made separately by experts of each technical Army and Navy service and assistance was rendered by British technicians who were already on the ground.

"The United States Army and Navy groups of the American aid mission operate somewhat independently, communicating directly with their Washington headquarters on technical matters, but coming under the jurisdiction of the Chief of the Mission in all policy matters. Aside from the initial task of determining the types and quantities of military supplies needed, the objective is to observe the receipt and distribution in Greece of the materials as they arrive, to assure proper and effective use of the material, and to instruct Greek personnel in the operation of American equipment which is not familiar to them.

"There are no United States combat troops in Greece. United States military personnel at the end of September totaled seventy-eight, of whom forty-three were Army personnel and thirty-five Navy.

"The Army ground-force portion of the Greek aid funds, now budgeted at approximately $140,000,000, constitutes nearly 90 per cent of the present program of military supplies. Procurement is being made from existing United States Army stocks, from surplus stocks wherever possible and from sources as close to Greece geographically as possible. Some equipment is coming from the Mediterranean area.

"On Aug. 2, 1947, the first United States ship arrived at Piraeus with general military cargo, vehicles and rations. By early September thirteen United States vessels had discharged 25,000 tons of all types of mili-

In regard to the Turkish Aid Program, the President's report states that a special survey mission was created to make an accurate determination of the military needs of Turkey and to maximize the effectiveness of the assistance to be provided. This mission comprised twelve ground force officers, three air force officers and two Department of State economists. Divided into sub-groups all the military facilities of Turkey were inspected. The report continues:

"After the return of the survey group and the submission of their recommendations as to the form that United States assistance should take, key mission personnel were selected. Serving directly under the chief of mission is a small staff headed by representatives of the United States armed forces, Major Gen. H. L. McBride for the Army, Rear Admiral T. G. W. Settle for the Navy, and Brig. Gen. Earl S. Hoag for the Air Force. Advance representatives of this staff are already in Turkey.

"The recommendations of the survey group regarding specific training and equipment programs are oriented toward two basic objectives:

"(1) Improvement of Turkey's economic status in the face of demands of national security, and

"(2) Maintenance of Turkish economic well-being to prevent developments of serious social unrest which might be used by a potential aggressor as an opening for penetration and undermining of Turkish political and economic institutions.

"It was the consensus of the survey group that this could best be accomplished by modernizing the Turkish Army so as to facilitate the earliest possible reduction in the amount of manpower and the number of draft animals required by the Army.

"This is hoped will result in the reduction of the economic burden to Turkey of supporting the Turkish armed forces, by increasing the effectiveness of these forces to a point at which Turkey can support them without outside assistance. This in turn should enable Turkey to increase her productive capacity, to add to the well-being of the Turkish people generally and to produce for export a supply of such critical items as coal and cereals, so vital to European recovery.

"The recommendations of the survey group were:

"(1) For purposes of increasing mobility, balance, firepower, and other modernizations and decreasing the manpower requirements of the Turkish armed forces, allotments of the $100,000,000 grant-in-aid as follows:

tary goods valued at $16,000,000. Several shiploads of material have been procured under the program from the United Kingdom, which is the only source for such items as spare parts and ammunition for British-type equipment.

"The unloading and distribution of supplies has kept pace with arrivals so that there has been no problem of ports becoming clogged or of goods piling up. Thirty thousand additional tons of supplies are either en route or are being loaded in United States ports. Training programs in signal, engineering and ordnance services have been inaugurated by the training section of the Army group.

"The air-force portion of the military program is budgeted at about $5,000,000. About half this amount is for aircraft and parts, $1,200,000 is for fuel and the remainder is for supplies. In addition 2,100,000 square feet of pierced-steel landing mat for making airfield runways usable during winter months is being provided from other funds.

"These improvements will enable the Royal Hellenic Air Force to give tactical support during the winter months to the Greek National Army. The Greek air force will procure materials locally and undertake other airfield improvements with United States technical guidance.

"The Greek Government and the Greek General Staff have made strong representations for American Mission approval of funds to support a permanent increase in the ground-force strength of 10,000 men and an extension for ninety days of the temporary increase of 20,000 men presently in effect, in order that recruits may be inducted and trained before an equivalent number of men with long terms of service are released. The military portion of the aid program has been augmented for these purposes by $9,000,000 over the original budget estimate, thus forcing a corresponding reduction in the civilian program.

"The naval portion of the military program is expected to enable the Greek Navy to accomplish two types of operation: to clear Greek coastal waters and harbors of mines, which hamper both shipping and fishing, and to support land operations. The United States Navy's schedule for procurement for Greece amounts to about $14,000,000. Of this $12,000,000 is for supplies consisting of fuel, technical equipment, clothing, and general stores.

"Six 176-foot patrol boats are being transferred to Greece. Greek crews to man these craft, numbering 250 officers and enlisted men, have been brought to this country for training. The United States Navy is procuring repair parts and equipment for Greek minesweepers.

"(a) For road-construction and maintenance equipment and technical training in the location, construction, and maintenance of roads—$5,000,000.

"(b) For naval equipment and technical training—$14,750,000.

"(c) For air-forces equipment and technical training—$26,750,000.

"(d) For ground-forces equipment and technical training—$48,500,000.

"(e) For the improvement of arsenals—$5,000,000.

"(2) Provision for technical assistance and advice on reorganization of the general staff and supply system aimed at improving efficiency and reducing manpower requirements.

"(3) Shipment at the earliest possible date of specific equipment recommended under ground, air, navy, road, and arsenals program and immediate selection and dispatch of qualified technical personnel requested for programs.

"Limitations of Turkish port and transportation facilities are a factor which can adversely influence the effectiveness of the aid program. For this reason special efforts have been made in this field.

"Col. Isaac W. Littell of the Transportation Corps has been designated as Port Officer to determine measures which must be taken to facilitate handling of aid cargoes and to direct and supervise the carrying out of such measures as prove necessary.

"In recognition of present inadequate facilities, the first shipments to Turkey have been machinery for cargo handling and road building. As of Sept. 15, shipments amounted to 1,592 long tons of equipment, including large and small cranes, tractors, road graders, and earth-moving equipment, together with the necessary spare parts for one year's maintenance.

While these initial steps are being taken, general staff discussions are continuing and United States technicians are working with the Turkish command to evolve a well-balanced program in terms of Turkish needs and United States availabilities."

Cemetery Superintendency

Legislation to make disabled male members of the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard eligible to become superintendents of national cemeteries was submitted for consideration by the Senate Committee on Armed Forces this week by, Secretaries Royall and Symington.

U. S. COAST GUARD

THE second meeting of the General Committee of the U. S. Safety at Sea Committees was held in Washington, D. C. on 21 Oct., with emphasis on the work of the committees in preparation for the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea, to be held in London in April 1948. Admiral J. F. Farley, Commandant of the U. S. Coast Guard and Chairman of the General Committee, introduced several speakers who discussed the various phases of the proposals.

Two committees were appointed to take into account all comments having to do with the organizational and technical features of the proposals, with power to make modifications. At the close of the meeting a movement was made "that the draft proposals as they may be amended by the special committees appointed by the Chairman, be submitted to the Department of State as having the approval of the General Committee." After the motion had been seconded and discussed it was put to a vote and unanimously carried. In view of the completion of the labors of the various committees, the Chairman announced the dissolution of the Safety and Sea Committees at the conclusion of the meeting.

A Coast Guard JRF on 31 October 1947, located the wreckage of the Pan American Clipper which crashed on the west side of Tangas Mountain on Annette Island, Alaska. All occupants of the clipper were killed in the crash and removal operations were hampered by winds of gale force and thick fog, which had impeded the search.

The following officers have been ordered home pending retirement for physical disability: Lt. Comdr. John Montrello, Lt. Comdr. Andrew J. Kelley (R).

On 24 October 1947, the President approved the following retirements:

Effective 1 Nov.

Comdr. Arthur Joachims (R); physical disability.

Comdr. Charles R. Peele; 20 years' service. Commo. Norman B. Hall; 30 years' service, retired as Rear Adm.

Lt. Comdr. Gustave A. Lohse; age. Rear Adm. Stanley V. Parker; age, retired as Vice Adm.

Effective 1 Dec.

Lt. Comdr. Gunnar Magnusson (R). Lt. Louis T. O'Neill; retired as Lt. Comdr.

Sports Front

ONE of the greatest of modern football series came to an end, temporarily, at least, when Notre Dame beat Army 27-7 at South Bend, Saturday, 8 November.

The words appearing in the public prints about cessation of hostilities must run into the hundreds of thousands. Everyone has his own idea as to why the series has been called off.

The authorities of both schools announced last year that the game had gotten out of hand, that it was no longer an affair primarily designed for the respective student bodies, and that the huge amount of gambling on the game plus three-figure asking prices for tickets made for an unhealthy situation.

Both schools have a long and honorable record of participation in collegiate athletics. Certainly the reputation of the authorities at both institutions is above reproach. No one can deny that the situation outlined above was an actual fact, nor that it constituted ample grounds for calling a halt.

The current trend, for which there is much justification, is to be suspicious of any official statement dealing with intercollegiate athletics. In this case, however, we're not concerned with colleges whose coaches must land a bowl bid to insure their job for next year. Winning football teams are important at West Point and South Bend, but they are far from the be-all and the end-all.

As for the game itself, Notre Dame, with the better team, won handily but far from overwhelmingly. Terry Brennan ran back Army's second kick-off (the first went out of bounds) for a touchdown. The Irish added another in the first period on an 80 yard drive, and from then on it was too much of an uphill battle for the Cadets.

Army's touchdown came on a 57 yard march that started late in the third quarter and culminated early in the fourth. Rowan went over for the tally, with Steffy adding the conversion.

Notre Dame's edge, surprisingly, came in its running game. Army had tightened its pass defense considerably, so Lujack ground out the yardage off tackle and around end, with an occasional pass thrown in to keep the defense from crowding the line. It was small wonder that the Irish, with many of last year's key men back, were able to defeat an Army team bereft of nearly all its starters.

Fumbles, fumbles, fumbles. It will be a happy day when a story can be written about a Navy team without using that dread word.

Midway in the fourth quarter the Midshipmen held a 14-9 lead over Georgia Tech, and the upset of the day seemed in the making. Then Schwoeffermann bobbled the ball on Navy's 35, and Tech recovered. The Rambling Wrecks scored two plays later. Final—Georgia Tech 16, Navy 14.

Until disaster struck, Navy had played its best game of the year, coming from behind to score twice on a team that had yielded but one previous touchdown this season. Schwoeffermann and Gerber, subbing for the ailing Hawking who is expected to be ready for Penn State, crossed the goal line for Navy, and Jim Wills continued batting 1,000 with two extra points.

Today (Saturday, 15 November)—Army versus Penn at Philadelphia, Navy versus Penn State at Baltimore. Both opponents are still undefeated.

Saturday, 22 November, is the traditional pre-Army-Navy open date on the schedule of both schools. The academies devote two full weeks of preparation to the annual shindig in Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium on 29 November. More on this game next week.

Clothes for Europe

A nine-ton Navy truck left Sims Hall, the Logistic branch of the Naval War College, 10 Nov. for Providence, R. I., with all the clothing collected by the local "Navy Wives Clothing Drive for Needy Europeans."

As the truck departed there were four very interested young persons there to see it off: Miss Babs White, daughter of Commander T. J. White, (CEC), of the Newport Training Station, Master Winfield Scott Cowell, Jr., and Daniel Thomas Cowell, sons of the Naval War College Marine Sergeant of the Guard, and Master Graham Raht, Jr., son of Commander Raht of the General Line School. They, too, had partaken in the cause for the needy of Europe.

Hamilton Field Command

Col. Wentworth Goss, USAF has been reassigned from Commanding Officer of Hamilton Field, Calif. to Headquarters, Air Transport Command, Washington, D. C. Replacing Colonel Goss as Commanding Officer is Col. George L. Usher, former Inspector General of the Fourth Air Force.

Navy Language Courses

Billets are available for qualified male officers in the Regular Navy for linguistic courses at the U. S. Naval School (Naval Intelligence), Naval Receiving Station, Anacostia, D. C.

The school will offer intensive courses in Russian, Japanese, Chinese, Spanish, French, German, Italian and Portuguese.

Upper age limit is 29, but applicants over that age will be considered if they show evidence of exceptional linguistic ability or accomplishment. Details of qualifications are given in Naval Bureau of Personnel Circular Letter 212-47.

Naval Personnel

jobs became increasingly more important and more complicated as the war went on and we got nearer and nearer the bottom of the manpower barrel.

The wartime Navy consists of approximately 4,000 different types of officer and enlisted billets. It is literally impossible for any one officer or group of officers in the Bureau of Naval Personnel to know all the different types of tasks that are performed by officers or enlisted men. It is even more unrealistic to expect a detailing officer to know the qualifications naval personnel should possess to successfully perform any sizable segment of this large number of naval jobs. Recognizing that the Navy must make specific plans to process several millions of persons in a short time in the event of another mobilization, the Bureau of Naval Personnel has a five-fold classification program now established on a small scale and ready to be expanded as necessity demands. In brief, this system consists of the following:

1. A job analysis program whereby all military jobs will be studied to determine the tasks performed on the job, potential procurement sources of qualified personnel in the civilian labor market, and other significant job data. This study gives first priority to new naval jobs, such as those developing in the radiological safety program, the guided missiles program, and to jobs for which the Navy will need specialists in case of emergency.

2. A qualifications analysis program whereby a study is made of the minimum and desirable qualifications a person should have to successfully perform a specific job. This research involves determination of the physical standards necessary for success in the billet, experience required, the education necessary, and other pertinent qualifications data.

3. The maintenance and expansion as necessary of the officers' qualifications record system whereby the skills, aptitudes, and other qualifications data of officers, both regulars and reserves, are analyzed and tabulated on punch cards for ready reference and use in personnel planning and assignment.

4. Continuance of enlisted classification and the immediate establishment of an adequate classification program for the enlisted reserve, whereby the qualifications of every member of both the organized and volunteer reserve can be determined and processed into an effective plan for rapid mobilization.

5. The strengthening of the personnel accounting system. This accounting system enables the Navy to know daily the on board count of each naval establishment by job code and other machine tabulated personnel information.

As a result of classification developments during World War II, the Navy today has a classification system probably unequalled by any other large governmental department or private industry. Future problems in the maintenance of the classification system, however, will be many. Budget limitations will place a tremendous burden on the Bureau of Naval Personnel in allocating sufficient funds and personnel to keep the system current and effectively operating. Cooperation of volunteer reserves will be essential. They must reply to the questionnaires which will be distributed periodically, probably once a year, so that the Bureau will be able to keep the qualifications records up to date.

Personnel experience in World War II has shown that an adequate classification system is the nerve center of any effective naval personnel program, and it is with this thought in mind that the Bureau of Naval Personnel is making every effort to place officers and enlisted men in billets for which they are qualified.

8th AF Budget & Fiscal Officer

Fort Worth, Tex.—Lt. Col. Paul W. Summers, AC, reported recently for duty at FWAAB and designated Budget and Fiscal Officer, Eighth Air Force. His previous station was at Harvard Univ. where he had attended its School of Business Administration.

Col. Summers replaces Capt. Edward C. Rotaryk as budget and fiscal officer, Eighth Air Force.

Air Force-Army Officers

President Truman on 14 Nov. approved recess appointments for 216 new commissioned officers in the Regular Army and Regular Air Force.

This will be the last increment of officers taken into the Regular Establishment under the provisions of Public Law 281, and brings to approximately 28,000 the number of officers nominated for the Regular Army or Regular Air Force under the two Integration Programs. Including officers already in the Regular Establishment prior to the integration programs, there will be approximately 40,000 Regulars after this increment is confirmed by the Senate.

A breakdown of the 216 nominated shows the following distribution by branches:

Medical Corps, 91; Dental Corps, 48; Medical Service Corps, 39; Air Corps, 20; Infantry, five; Quartermaster Corps, five; Chemical Corps, two; Corps of Engineers, one; Signal Corps, one; Adjutant General's Department, one; Judge Advocate General's Department, one; Chaplain Corps, one; Field Artillery, one.

THE Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Sullivan, the Under Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. W. John Kenney, and the Chief of Naval Operation and Mrs. Nimitz were among the many who went to Quantico to celebrate the 172nd birthday of the founding of the Marine Corps. So big was the party, a dinner-dance, that it was held in two places, the Waller Building and BOQ 17, where the traditional ceremony of cutting the big and beautiful birthday cake took place.

There were additional celebrations at the NCO Club, the Privates Club, and the aviation officers airfield, each with its own cake highlighting the occasion.

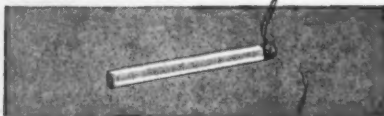

As the commandant of the Marine Corps, General Alexander A. Vandegrift was at Camp LeJeune, N. C., the Assistant Commandant, Maj. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd was the official host at the Commandant's Birthday Ball which took place at the Army-Navy Club, instead as formerly held at the Marine Barracks. Some thirteen hundred guests were invited and the Marine Band Orchestra furnished the music. There was a pageant showing incidents of all the wars the United States has taken part in, with the exception of the Civil War.

Enlisted personnel also celebrated this day, with a buffet dinner at Henderson Hall, Arlington, Va., and the Fifth Infantry Reserve Battalion celebrated at the Armory. The Marine Corps League also simultaneously observed its 25th birthday.

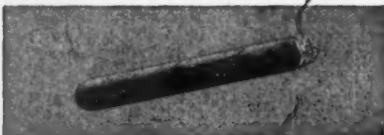

Lt. Gen. and Mrs. Robert L. Elchelberger were honor guests at a dinner Thursday evening given by Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Gordon R. Young and the same night officers and civilian personnel of the Military Planning Division of the Quartermaster Corps gave a large dinner-dance at the National War College Officers' Club.

Capt. James R. Bandy, USAF, who has spent the last three and a half years in Japan, has been assigned to Orlando, Fla. He and Mrs. Bandy spent several days in Washington with her mother, Mrs. Warner, on their way to their new post.

• A limited number of copies of the Army and Navy Journal's historic volumes, "United States At War" is still available. This series, the first volume of which was published 7 December 1942 with succeeding volumes each year until the War's end, forms a complete history of World War II in authoritative articles written by Military, Naval and civilian leaders actually in charge of the operations in the active theaters and at home. Profusely illustrated, they merit a place in every well balanced library.

A small number of each of the four volumes is ready for distribution at $3.00 per copy in paper binding and $5.00 in cloth binding. (Volume I is available only in paper binding.)

Financial Digest

Loans by the nation's banks rose approximately $3 billion during the first half of 1947, reaching a total of $39 billion, according to a joint report made this week by the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

At the same time, the report states that bank investments in securities declined over $3 billion to $93 billion. Cause of the decline was redemption of government securities in the debt retirement program.

The report listed the total assets of all operating banks in the United States and possessions as $167 billion at the half year mark, and deposits at $154 billion.

It was announced by the three agencies that henceforth they will continue to consolidate their bank reports into a single tabulation instead of using separate data for the banks in their respective jurisdictions.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation will issue the reports twice a year. Past procedure calling for bank condition statements will not be changed however.

Senator Flanders (R-Vt.) has completed recommendations on checking rising prices for submission to the Joint Committee on the Economic Report. He said his group, which studied conditions in the eastern United States, has agreed not to make any statement concerning their findings until their report reaches the full committee. Two other subcommittees have been making studies in the western states.

The matter of the sale of American tankers to foreign purchasers has now assumed major importance. Repeated protests have been made against the sale by Senator Wherry (R-Nebr.). Senator Taft (R-O.) wired the Maritime Commission to hold foreign tanker sales in abeyance until Congress meets 17 Nov. Special hearings on the matter have been called by the Senate Small Business Committee.

The National Federation of American Shipping criticizes certain Marshall Plan proposals as they relate to international shipping. A statement issued 7 Nov. by the Federation says that the final draft of the Marine Transport Committee on the shipping aspects of the Marshall Plan was completed in Paris 5 Sept. and that the Federation did not receive a copy until 22 Oct. "notwithstanding daily requests," adding, "It is regrettable that the basic industries vitally affected by any agreement reached are not brought into close consultation." The Federation statement says that many parts of the draft are not clear and explanations are still being sought from shipping experts representing these nations by State Department representatives.

Merchant Marine Reservists and others assigned active duty as engineering officers in the future will find themselves in charge of many damage control and hull duties formerly under the cognizance of deck officers. To broaden their knowledge of damage control or to obtain refresher training in related subjects, EM officers may request 14-day training duty with pay and allowances in Naval damage control schools on East or West coasts.

The Invitation-Membership program of the Junior Army Navy Guild Organization, better known as Jango, will be inaugurated at a luncheon on Tuesday, 25 Nov. The over 18's and associate members and their guests will meet at the Army Navy Country Club at 12:30 o'clock.

Honor guests will be Mrs. Kenneth Royall, wife of the Secretary of the Army; Mrs. John L. Sullivan, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; and Mrs. W. Stuart Symington, wife of the Secretary of the Air Force.

A special feature at the luncheon will be a showing of about 30 hats designed by Philip Robertson and modeled by Jangos.

Mrs. Robert Chaplain, chairman of the membership program, will be assisted by Mrs. Ralph Walker, entertainment chairman.

Jango has proved itself in war and peace as an effective agent for linking service aid to community benefit and also as a social meeting ground for the wives and daughters of all the services in the city of Washington.

Membership is open to wives, daughters, sisters, and granddaughters of officers who are serving or have served in the Armed Forces.

Because of the transiency of Jango membership, Mrs. John W. Bowman, president, reports that the executive committee has elected to set aside a certain period of each year to devote to the consideration of those qualified and interested in joining the organization.
